Quick Question
“Have you ever heard of the term ‘Gig Economy’?”

Gig Economy

“Activity where people earn income providing on-demand work, services or goods”

- Internal Revenue Service (IRS)

Gig Economy (Analogy)

Think of the gig economy like a video game where you can pick and choose mini-missions to earn coins.

Instead of playing one-long level over and over (like a regular job), you get to do quick tasks (side-quest) for different people whenever you want.

Each time you finish a task, you earn money—just like leveling up!

GIG ECONOMY
= SIDE HUSTLE***

*) But done beyond the regular job

Side-hustle

A side-hustle is when you decide to make some extra money by doing something fun or cool on your own time. Maybe you sell lemonade at a stand, make friendship bracelets to sell to your friends, or even draw pictures for people who pay you.

So, the gig economy is like a big menu of quick jobs you can choose from, and a side-hustle is what you call it when you pick something off that menu to make extra money on your own time.

Background Gig Economy

THE FACE OF THE Gig Economy

There is still a shortage of comprehensive data on gig workers, and while the Bureau of Labor Statistics collected data on gig workers in 2017, they have yet to compile that information into a report. Though it has been some time before more detailed information on the gig economy is available, the following infographic delivers a brief demographic overview of gig workers.

ETHNICITY IN THE GIG ECONOMY<sup>2</sup>

PARTICIPATION IN GIG ECONOMY BY AGE

However, this varies by industry:

UBER DRIVERS BY AGE<sup>19</sup>

this is up to 162 million people

KEY FINDINGS

Size and Scope of Indonesia's Gig Economy

Most Gig Workers in Indonesia are in Urban Area

Key Factors for Urban-Rural Disparity

in urban areas

Higher population density in cities, driving demand for services

technology between urban and rural regions

Demographic Profile of Indonesia's Gig Economy

Most Gig Workers in Indonesia are in Millennials Generation

Key Factors for Generation Disparity

Likely due to greater technological familiarity and a preference for flexible work arrangements.

Demographic Profile of Indonesia's Gig Economy

Most Gig Workers in Indonesia are in Male

Despite the imbalance, gig work can empower women economically by offering flexible income opportunities, especially in sectors like e-commerce, freelancing, or caregiving

Key Factors Contributing to Disparity

Accessibility barriers for women (e.g., safety concerns, cultural norms).

Unequal access to technology or digital platforms in certain regions.

Gendered expectations around work roles (e.g., transportation gigs being male-dominated)

Center for Employment and Labor Studies at the University of Indonesia in 2020

Demographic Profile of Indonesia's Gig Economy

Number of Woman Workers per Job Status (Millions)

Key Factors Contributing to Disparity

Employee:

Women prefer formal employment due to its stability, benefits, and alignment with societal norms around "acceptable" work for women.

Contributing Family Worker:

Aligns with traditional gender roles, offers flexibility, and requires no formal skills, making it more accessible for women in rural areas.

Demographic Profile of Indonesia's Gig Economy

Gig workers are more likely to hold university degrees than non-gig workers

Key Factors Contributing to Disparity

This challenges the stereotype that gig work predominantly attracts less-educated individuals.

Higher education workers may opt for gig work due to its flexibility, autonomy, and opportunities to apply advanced skills (e.g., tech, freelancing).

Demographic Profile of Indonesia's Gig Economy

Most Gig Workers in Indonesia have prior employment experience

Prior employment experience helps gig workers build a portfolio or set of skills

Key Factors Contributing to Disparity

This suggest gig work is often a deliberate choice rather than a first-time entry into the labor market.

Prior work experience likely equips gig workers with transferable skills (e.g., time management, client interaction) that enhance their adaptability and success in the gig economy.

BUILDING RESILIENCE: Learning and Growth

See challenges, mistakes, and failures as opportunities to learn and grow.

What specific work-related challenge, mistake, or failure have you faced (e.g., missed deadline, project setback, conflict)? How can you reframe this as a learning opportunity for your professional growth?

"I've applied to 20+ gigs but haven't landed a client yet. At first, I took rejections personally, but now I see it as a chance to improve. I'm learning to tailor my pitches better, highlight relevant skills, and study successful profiles. This struggle is teaching me persistence and how to stand out in a competitive market."

Seek the valuable lesson in every setback or problem. Ask yourself, "What can I learn from this experience?"

What positive insight did you gain about your skills, resilience, or teamwork from a past work difficulty?

"Getting no responses from clients was discouraging, but it showed me I'm resilient enough to keep trying. I realized my pitches were too generic, so I practiced writing clearer, client-focused proposals. This taught me that rejection isn't about my worth—it's about improving how I communicate my value. Now I feel more confident with each attempt."

4 minutes

BUILDING RESILIENCE: Positive Outlook

Keep your mind focused on your goals, and continually search for ways to achieve them.

What are two short-term and/or long-term career goals you can prioritize to stay motivated and forward-focused?

Short-term:

Send at least 5 tailored proposals per week, focusing on jobs that match my exact skills.

Long-term:

Build a portfolio with 3-5 sample projects (even unpaid) to showcase my work and gain credibility.

These goals keep me taking action, not just waiting for luck.

Maintain a hopeful outlook, and look for the good in every problem or difficulty. Tell yourself "Something good will come from this."

When a project or task doesn't go as planned, ask: "What skill, process, or relationship can I improve from this experience?"

After 10 unanswered proposals, I asked myself this and realized:

1. Skill: Improve my pitch-writing by studying successful freelancers' approaches.
2. Process: Follow up politely after 3-4 days instead of waiting passively.
3. Relationship: Start commenting on potential clients' posts to build visibility before pitching.

4 minutes

BUILDING RESILIENCE: Adaptability

Maintain a problem-solving and solution-oriented mindset when facing difficult situations.

When facing a workplace issue (e.g., team conflict, unclear expectations), do you tend to dwell on the problem or actively seek solutions? How could shifting your focus help?

At first, I obsessed over "Why won't anyone hire me?"—which drained my motivation. Now, I solution-focus:

1. If pitches fail, I test different styles or offer discounted trial work.
2. If my profile gets no views, I optimize keywords or add portfolio samples.

Shifting to "What can I try next?" turns frustration into progress.

Learn to be flexible in situations you can't control – Go with the flow, Let things go, Don't let things get to you, Be agreeable, Be patient, Be accepting of help.

What upcoming project, milestone, or opportunity can you look forward to, even during stressful times?

I'm excited to:

1. Complete my portfolio (milestone): Adding 2-3 more samples this month to showcase my best work.
2. First client testimonial (opportunity): Even if it's a small project, it'll prove my credibility.

Focusing on these keeps me motivated when rejections pile up. Progress, not perfection!

4 minutes

BUILDING RESILIENCE: Social Support

Recognize when to ask for, and accept help from others.

Who are two colleagues, mentors, or supervisors you can reach out to for guidance or support during tough work situations?

1. Freelancer Friend: A colleague who landed their first gig last year—they've offered to review my pitches and share what worked for them.
2. Online Mentor: Joined a freelancing Facebook group where experienced members give feedback on profiles.

Be unaffected by the negativity of others.

What two strategies can you use to stay calm and professional when dealing with a difficult coworker or client (e.g., active listening, setting boundaries)?

1. Pause & Reflect: If a potential client responds rudely, I'll take 10 minutes to cool down before replying professionally—focusing on solutions, not emotions.
2. Boundary Scripts: Practice polite but firm responses like, "I'd love to help, but this scope requires X adjustments to deliver quality work."

4 minutes

BUILDING RESILIENCE: Self-Care

Practice Self-Care - Exercise, sleep well, eat well, focus on interests and creative outlets, spend time with positive and encouraging people, use healthy coping skills to manage stress.

What three practices can you adopt this week to manage stress at work (e.g., time-blocking, taking breaks, setting boundaries)?

1. Time-Blocking: Dedicate 1-hour focused sessions for pitching (no distractions), then 15-minute breaks to recharge.
2. Rejection Reset: After each "no," do a quick mindfulness exercise (e.g., deep breaths) to avoid spiraling.
3. End-of-Day Wind Down: Watch a comedy show or call a friend to shift focus from work stress.

Practice gratitude and optimism in all situations.

What three aspects of your job or career are you grateful for (e.g., supportive team, growth opportunities, work-life balance)?

Even without my first client yet, I'm grateful for:

1. Flexibility: Gig work lets me choose projects that fit my skills and schedule.
2. Learning Curve: Every rejection teaches me how to improve my approach.
3. Low-Risk Start: I can build experience without quitting my full-time job.
