

Job Seeker LinkedIn Checklist

Make it easy for recruiters and industry leaders to understand your direction and evidence.

START WITH MUST DO. A simple, complete profile is better than a decorative but unclear one.

Start with the required actions. Improve the optional details only after the basics are complete.

Your goal

Target role	[Write here]	Location	[City / open to relocate / remote]
Top 5 keywords	[From job posts]	Profile language	English / Bahasa Indonesia
Proof to show	[Project/internship/portfolio]	Weekly goal	[Example: 5 relevant connections]

Must do first - about 20 minutes

Done	Profile area	What good looks like
☐	Name	Use your professional name consistently with your CV and application.
☐	Headline	State target role or field, two or three relevant skills, and proof or focus. Do not write only 'Open to Work' or another generic status.
☐	Location	Use your current city or realistic work location preference. Do not publish your street address.
☐	About	Write one or two short paragraphs: direction, relevant evidence, strengths, and the opportunity you seek.
☐	Education	Add degree, field, institution, dates, and relevant projects, activities, or achievements.
☐	Experience	Add internships, part-time work, volunteering, organizations, or project roles. Label each context honestly.
☐	Skills	Add role-relevant skills you can explain or demonstrate. Put the most important first.
☐	Contact and URL	Add a professional email in Contact Info and create a clean public profile URL when available.
☐	Proofread	Check spelling, dates, links, capitalization, and consistency with your CV.

Benchmark profile example

Use the public example to study structure and evidence, not to copy wording: linkedin.com/in/hieronymuskb

Live-view note: LinkedIn may require sign-in before it shows the complete public profile. Review only information the profile owner has made public.

PROFILE OVERVIEW - WHAT A RECRUITER SHOULD UNDERSTAND QUICKLY
Name, headline, location	The same professional name as the CV; a headline with target role, relevant skills, and proof; a realistic work location.
About and evidence	A short direction statement supported by experience, projects, results, skills, and safe work samples.

Four things to inspect

- Clarity: Can you understand the person's direction from the top section?
- Evidence: Do the About, experience, projects, and Featured items support the headline?
- Consistency: Do dates, role names, and results align across the profile and CV?
- Privacy: Is the profile useful without exposing unnecessary personal information?

Write the main sections

Copy the structure, then replace every detail with your truth.

Headline formula

Formula

Target role or field | 2-3 relevant skills | Evidence, industry, or career focus

Fictional example

Graduate Marketing Associate | Social Media Reporting, Excel, Content Planning | Internship and Campus Project Experience

Avoid long lists, unsupported labels such as 'expert', and a headline made only of 'Open to Work'. Recruiters should understand your direction in one glance.

Add proof, then improve discovery

These sections are useful after the essentials are complete.

Strong profile - improve next

Done	Section	What to do
☐	Featured	Add 1-3 strong, safe samples: portfolio, capstone, article, presentation, or project result.
☐	Projects	Explain the problem, your role, action, tools, and result. Credit teammates.
☐	Licenses and certifications	Add relevant, completed credentials with the issuer and date. Do not add incomplete courses as certificates.
☐	Volunteer experience	Include work that shows relevant skills, responsibility, or service.
☐	Recommendations	Ask a supervisor, lecturer, project lead, or teammate who directly observed your work.
☐	Banner	Optional. Use a simple image connected to your field or portfolio. Keep text readable and avoid clutter.
☐	Profile visibility	Review public profile, email, phone, connections, and Open to Work settings. Share only what supports your goal and comfort.
☐	Job preferences	Set target roles, locations, and work type accurately so recommendations are more relevant.

Keyword check

Read 5-10 real job posts for your target role. Write recurring skills and terms below. Use a keyword only when it is true for you and supported in your profile.

Keyword	Where I use it	My proof
[]	Headline / About / Experience / Skills	[Project, task, or result]
[]	Headline / About / Experience / Skills	[Project, task, or result]
[]	Headline / About / Experience / Skills	[Project, task, or result]

Connect and stay safe

A profile becomes useful when you build relevant, respectful relationships.

A small weekly routine

- [] Update one project, skill, achievement, or result when it changes.
- [] Connect with professional contacts, lecturers, internship colleagues, industry leaders, event contacts, and people you genuinely know.
- [] Send up to five relevant, personalized connection requests. Quality matters more than volume.
- [] Comment thoughtfully on one or two relevant posts. Add information, a question, or a clear learning point.
- [] Save suitable jobs and track applications outside LinkedIn so you do not apply twice.

Connection request example

To an industry leader after a webinar

Hello Kak Rina, I work in [current field] and am moving toward junior marketing roles. I appreciated your point about using customer insight in content planning during today's webinar. I am exploring junior marketing roles and would be glad to stay connected. Thank you.

Recruiter message example

Short and specific

Hello Ms. Sari, I applied for the Graduate Marketing Associate role through [official channel]. My internship included social media reporting and content planning, which match the role requirements. I have attached no documents here because I followed the application portal. Thank you for your consideration.

Do not send repeated messages, demand a reply, or ask someone you do not know for a job immediately. Do not claim a relationship that does not exist.

Privacy and recruitment safety

Protect yourself

Do not publish your NIK, KTP, or family card scan, full home address, bank details, password, or OTP. Verify a vacancy through the company's official website, official LinkedIn page, or trusted job platform. Do not pay administration, training, travel, accommodation, or uniform fees to continue a recruitment process.

Final profile check

Confirm the basics, understand the limits, and choose your next action.

- [] A recruiter can understand my target role, top skills, and strongest evidence in about 30 seconds.
- [] My dates, role names, and results match my CV and are truthful.
- [] Every link works and opens the intended safe content.
- [] My profile language is clear and consistent.
- [] I reviewed what the public can see and removed unnecessary personal data.
- [] I know my next action: improve one section, connect with someone relevant, or apply through an official channel.
