Understanding Your Career Transition

Meet Rina: A Story Many of Us Know

Rina is a final-year student activist at a university in Jakarta.

She has led 5 campus organizations, organized 20+ events, and advocated for student rights.

But now, graduation is near. She feels proud yet anxious.

Her friends are getting jobs, but she doesn't know what she wants.

She keeps asking herself:

"Will my activism experience matter in the workplace?"

Sound Familiar?

This story reflects the experience of many BAKTI NUSA awardees.

The transition from campus activist to professional is a journey many of you are on right now.

You're not alone in this.

Pause & Reflect: Where Are You Right Now?

What excites you most about entering the professional world?

Take 1 minute to reflect. You can share your answers in the chat or keep them personal. There's no pressure — this is your space to think.

Reflection is the first step toward clarity. There are no wrong answers here.

Pause & Reflect: Where Are You Right Now?

If you could describe your current feeling in one word, what would it be?

Take 1 minute to reflect. You can share your answers in the chat or keep them personal. There's no pressure — this is your space to think.

Reflection is the first step toward clarity. There are no wrong answers here.

What Is Career Transition, Really?

Career transition is the psychological and practical shift from one life role to another. It's not just about getting a job — it's about identity transformation.

Based on William Bridges' Transition Model; adapted for career transitions

The Career Transition Map

You may move back and forth between phases. That's completely normal; growth is not linear.

That's where we'll focus today.

Don't worry; every BAKTI NUSA awardee has room to grow, and that's exactly why we're here.

QUIZ

Quiz Time — Let's do a moment of answering
what we have consumed as food for thought

Which of the following BEST describes career transition?

A. Just finding your first job

B. A psychological and practical identity shift from one life role to another

C. Moving to a new city for work

Which of the following BEST describes career transition?

A. Just finding your first job

B. A psychological and practical identity shift from one life role to another

C. Moving to a new city for work

Career transition involves identity transformation; changing how you see yourself and how the world sees you. It's not just about practical changes like finding a job or moving cities.

Building Self-Leadership

The Story of Two Graduates

Andi

Waits for opportunities to come

Blames circumstances when things go wrong

Does the minimum required

Avoids feedback and challenges

Feels stuck and powerless

After 2 years: Same position, same complaints

VS

Budi

Sets clear goals and pursues them

Takes ownership of outcomes

Seeks feedback and learns from it

Takes initiative even in small tasks

Feels empowered and growing

After 2 years: Promoted twice, leading a team

The difference? Self-leadership.

What Made the Difference?

Think of someone you know who "takes charge" of their own growth. What do they do differently?

When faced with a challenge, do you tend to wait for direction or take initiative?

What's one area of your life where you already practice self-leadership well?

Reflect for 1 minute. Optional: Share one insight in the chat. Notice patterns in how you approach challenges.

Self-awareness is the first pillar of self-leadership. You're building it right now.

The Three Pillars of Self-Leadership

Self-Awareness

The Foundation

Knowing your strengths, values, triggers, and patterns

Ask yourself:

What am I good at?

What drives me?

What holds me back?

Self-Management

The Engine

Setting goals, managing time, regulating emotions, taking accountability

Ask yourself:

Do I follow through?

How do I handle stress?

Do I own my choices?

Self-Direction

The Navigator

Having a vision, making proactive choices, continuously learning

Ask yourself:

Where am I headed?

Am I growing daily?

Do I create my path?

These three pillars work together. Weakness in one affects the others. Strength in one lifts all three.

From Self-Leadership to Career Action

Self-Awareness

"I know what I bring"

Identify your transferable skills from activism — leadership, communication, project management, advocacy

Self-Management

"I make things happen"

Create structured career action plans — set milestones, track progress, hold yourself accountable

Self-Direction

"I know where I'm going"

Align career choices with personal purpose — choose paths that match your values and vision

Key Insight: Self-leadership isn't just about personal growth — it's your career strategy. Each pillar directly translates to a professional competency that employers value.

Your Self-Leadership Action Plan

Self-Awareness

"I will discover more about my by doing

_____"

Self-Management

"I will improve my

by

_____"

Self-Direction

"My career direction toward starts with

_____"

Take 3 minutes. Write in your notes or type in chat. Pick the action you will start THIS WEEK. Small steps, taken consistently, create massive change.

My commitment this week: I will start with action #__ on _____ (day).

QUIZ

what we have consumed as food for thought

Which of the following is NOT one of the Three Pillars of Self-Leadership?

A. Self-Awareness

B. Self-Management

C. Self-Promotion

Which of the following is NOT one of the Three Pillars of Self-Leadership?

A. Self-Awareness

B. Self-Management

C. Self-Promotion

Self-Promotion is a useful skill but not a core pillar of self-leadership. The Three Pillars are Self-Awareness (knowing yourself), Self-Management (disciplining yourself), and Self-Direction (guiding yourself).

03

Re-branding from Activist to Professional

The Activist's Dilemma

Sound Familiar?

“Will employers see my activism as 'just student stuff'?”

“Do I have 'real' work experience?”

“How do I explain 3 years of organizing protests and events in a job interview?”

Many awardees feel their activist background doesn't count as professional experience.

Here's the Truth

Activism builds

EXACTLY

the skills employers want.

You just need to learn the language.

What Skills Did You Actually Build?

List 3 situations where you had to solve a difficult problem as an activist

When did you have to convince someone who disagreed with you?

How did you manage a team when things went wrong?

These are the SAME skills employers ask about in interviews. Problem-solving, persuasion, and team management are core professional competencies. You just need to learn the language.

Take 2 minutes. Write down your examples. In the next slide, we'll learn how to translate them into professional language.

Translating Activism into Professional Language

Your activism experience → Professional competency

What You Did (Activism)		How to Say It (Professional)
Organized campus events	→	Project Management & Event Coordination
Led a team of 20 volunteers	→	Team Leadership & Resource Mobilization
Negotiated with university administration	→	Stakeholder Engagement & Advocacy
Managed a budget of 5M rupiah	→	Financial Planning & Budget Management
Ran social media campaigns	→	Digital Marketing & Communications Strategy

Pro tip: Use these phrases in your CV, LinkedIn, and interviews. The experience is the same — only the language changes.

Building Your Professional Brand

Your personal brand = What people think of when they hear your name

1 Define Your Value

What problems can you solve?

What makes you different from others with similar backgrounds?

What do people come to you for?

2 Craft Your Story

Connect your activism journey to your professional goals.

Make it coherent: past → present → future.

Make it authentic.

3 Show Up Consistently

LinkedIn profile that reflects your brand

Portfolio or work samples

Professional interactions aligned with your values

Your brand should reflect both WHO you are and WHERE you're going.

Your Professional Brand Worksheet

Fill in the blanks:

"I am a _____ professional who helps _____ (target audience) to _____ (outcome) by using my skills in _____, _____, and _____ (from activism).

My unique strength is _____.

In 5 years, I want to be known as _____."

Pro tip: This sentence is the foundation of your LinkedIn "About" section and your interview introduction.

Complete it, refine it, and memorize it.

QUIZ

Quiz Time — Let's do a moment of answering
what we have consumed as food for thought

Which skill translation is MOST accurate?

A. "Managed event budgets" → "Financial Planning & Budget Management"

B. "Posted on Instagram" → "Social Media Addiction"

C. "Volunteered for events" → "Free Labor Experience"

Which skill translation is MOST accurate?

A. "Managed event budgets" → "Financial Planning & Budget Management"

B. "Posted on Instagram" → "Social Media Addiction"

C. "Volunteered for events" → "Free Labor Experience"

Financial Planning & Budget Management are professional competencies directly developed through managing event budgets. The other options frame valuable skills negatively or inaccurately.

04

Emotional Resilience for the Journey

When the Road Gets Bumpy

A Familiar Scenario

You've applied to 150 jobs. You've had 5 interviews. All rejected.

Your friend already got a job. Your parents are asking questions.

You start thinking:

"Maybe I'm not good enough."

"Maybe my activism was a waste of time."

"Maybe I should just take any job."

This Is Normal

This is the emotional reality of career transition.

It's not a sign of weakness. It's a sign that you care.

And the good news?

You CAN prepare for it.

How Do You Handle Setbacks?

Think of the last time you faced a major disappointment.

1) What did you do?; 2) What helped you recover?

Reflect for 1 minute. Notice patterns in how you cope. This awareness is the first step to building resilience.

Resilience isn't about never falling. It's about knowing how to get back up.

How Do You Handle Setbacks?

Who do you turn to when things get difficult? Who is in your support circle?

Reflect for 1 minute. Notice patterns in how you cope. This awareness is the first step to building resilience.

Resilience isn't about never falling. It's about knowing how to get back up.

How Do You Handle Setbacks?

What is one belief or value that has helped you through hard times before?

Reflect for 1 minute. Notice patterns in how you cope. This awareness is the first step to building resilience.

Resilience isn't about never falling. It's about knowing how to get back up.

Building Your Emotional Resilience

Reframe the Narrative

"I was rejected" → "I gained interview experience"

"I failed" → "I learned what to improve"

Your interpretation shapes your reality.

Build Your Support Circle

Identify 3 people who believe in you: a mentor, a peer, and a family member. Reach out to them regularly.

Practice the STOP Method

Stop — Pause before reacting

Take a breath — Calm your body

Observe — What are you feeling?

Proceed — Choose your response

Connect to Purpose

Remember WHY you're doing this. Your contribution to Indonesia. Your family. Your future self. Purpose fuels persistence.

Your Resilience Toolkit

Create Your Personal Resilience Plan

When I feel _____ (e.g., rejected, anxious, lost), I will:

1. Remind myself that _____ (reframe)
2. Reach out to _____ (support person)
3. Take care of myself by _____ (self-care)
4. Remember my purpose: _____

Example:

"When I feel rejected, I will:

1. Remind myself that each no gets me closer to yes
2. Reach out to my mentor Kak Rina
3. Take care by going for a run
4. Remember: I want to serve Indonesia"

Complete this plan. Keep it somewhere visible. Use it when things get hard. You've got this.

QUIZ

Quiz Time — Let's do a moment of answering
what we have consumed as food for thought

What is the FIRST step in the STOP method for emotional resilience?

A. Take a deep breath

B. Stop and pause

C. Observe your feelings

What is the FIRST step in the STOP method for emotional resilience?

A. Take a deep breath

B. Stop and pause

C. Observe your feelings

STOP stands for Stop, Take a breath, Observe, Proceed. The first step is to STOP; pause before reacting. This creates the space needed for mindful response instead of emotional reaction.
